Career Path Objectives

After some thought and investigation into a possible alternative to my current major at Forsyth Tech, I have decided to remain in the Web Technologies program until completion. During my third semester, I thought I might want to be a substance abuse counselor so I looked into it. My life experience combined with a desire to help others and my newfound preference for psychology over technology made that sound like a good career path. After interviewing two people who were already professionals in that business, I decided against it. The realities of that job simply did not fit with reasons for wanting it. So now I am back to continuing with Web Technologies.

I will be a Web Developer and to do so, I intend to continue on to a bachelor's degree at a four year college. Sometime during this semester I will need to speak with a career counselor here at the school and create a plan for transferring to the next school. Hopefully, there will be a way to finance this goal. Perhaps my associate's degree will enable me to secure a part time position that will, at the very least, cover my living expenses while allowing enough time for my studies. I feel like I will need more time to develop the skill level I want to have after finally leaving school. A combination of career related work and continued education should place me just where I want to be when I embark on my career.
